Guest Speaker Bio

Dr. Erika Maria Moseson is a pulmonary and critical care medicine physician (or "lung and ICU doctor" depending on your audience). She attended medical school at Cornell University, trained at UCSF for internal medicine and completed her fellowship at Oregon Health and Sciences University. She is the founder of Air Health Our Health, an educational resource regarding the intersection between breathing healthy air and the wellbeing and wealth of our communities. She hosts the Air Health Our Health podcast as well, interviewing experts on everything from tobacco and vaping to diesel exhaust and policy options to improve public health. She is passionate about physician advocacy, and is one of the American Lung Association's Health Professionals for Clean Air and Climate Action. She currently serves as the President of Oregon Thoracic Society and practices full time pulmonary and critical care medicine while mothering three amazing young children.
